Congratulations to:

Aldi of Lancaster is and has always been known for being dedicated to reducing their environmental impact. They are not only 100% committed to reducing waste, reusing materials and recycling their waste, they also strive to decrease their carbon footprint and increase energy efficiency in their store. Aldi strives to move towards a completely zero-waste business model and even participates in the EPA Food Recovery Challenge, which helps to prevent/divert their food waste. Customers are encouraged to bring in their own reusable bags, or purchase them from Aldi directly for regular use. Shoppers can even use the cardboard boxes used to stock products for their shopping experience, taking them home to be reused! Those who shop at Aldi can see how dedicated they are to reducing their waste in all areas, from purchasing to stocking, and even logistics!

Lancaster Eagle Gazette.
PART OF THE USA TODAY NETWORK

The Lancaster Eagle Gazette, our local newspaper industry on Broad Street in downtown Lancaster also works hard to divert their paper waste from the landfills! All of their old newspapers are donated to the local Goodwill for packaging of fragile items. What a great way to reduce waste and give back to our local community!
